

Oh boy!

A snippet from the October 16 issue of Oh Boy!, with Mark Hill as the plotting Terry. Reproduced by kind permission of IPC Magazines Ltd.

Mark's a model footballer

THERE was a surprise in store for teacher and footballer Mick Kiely when he confiscated a girls' magazine from a pupil at a north London school. Thumbing through the October 16 edition of Oh Boy!, Mr Kiely, on a month's loan to Wycombe Wanderers FC, recognised a familiar face.

There, in a romantic illustrated story titled Matchmaking Madness, was a series of pictures of his clubmate at Loakes Park, Mark Hill.

Mark, who used to play for Brentford in the Football League, was playing the part of scheming lover Terry, who ended the story kissing his girlfriend's best mate.

The story, spread over four pages, has been read by thousands of girls all over the country — but the most interested readers were Mark's soccer colleagues at Wycombe.

After surviving the ribbing that the other players were bound to give him, 21-year-old Mark explained how he ended up as a model.

"I'd been released by Brentford and was looking for a job. I saw this advertisement for a part-time job at a modelling agency, applied, and was taken on.

"They pay £40 a day and I've already done several sessions. I'll be appearing in Eagle in the near future."

Mark, who lives in Bedfont, Middlesex, close to Heathrow, has recently acquired a job at a nearby electrical shop. "But that does not mean I won't be doing any more modelling," explained the handsome footballer, who has become a favourite of Wycombe's female fans.

However, at the moment, his mind is concentrated on football. A speedy and talented left back, he has been the club's most consistent player this season and has his sights on glory on the field.

He will be a member of the Wycombe side that meet Bristol Rovers in the first round of the FA Cup on Saturday week (November 20).

All at Loakes Park agreed — Mark is a model footballer!