

Mark Hill receives his Player of the Month tankard from David Addy of Norman Reeves before the local derby with Slough on Saturday.

Award for Hill

DEFENDER Mark Hill has become the third different Wycombe Wanderers player to be chosen as Player of the Month, this season.

He received the November award of an inscribed tankard and a £20 cheque for the charity of his choice from David Addy of club sponsors Norman Reeves before the local derby match with Slough on Saturday.

Hill, who chose to donate the money to the children's ward at Wycombe General Hospital, has been a model of consistency this season at left back.

The former Brentford defender had a particularly notable game against Bristol Rovers, during which he had a golden chance to score after a brilliant run. He has proved to be a marvellous signing by Mike Keen.

The awards for September and October went to midfield man George Borg and goalkeeper Gary Lester respectively. When is a forward going to win it?

... and for Keen

MIKE Keen has been voted the Isthmian League Premier Division manager of the month for November. He will receive a gallon of whisky from P. Mackenzie & Co. It is the third time he has won the award.

Mr Keen, who has kept the other two gallons, said it was an honour for the whole club, particularly his assistant manager Alan Davies and successful Reserve team boss Tim Anning. "The whole playing staff have worked very hard for this award," he said.
