

Early score changed game

A DISAPPOINTED Mike Keen said after the match: "I always thought it was going to be difficult. They put their chances away and that early goal changed the game.

"If we had scored first then it would have been a different story. Chelmsford played well and just had that little bit more experience."

The Wycombe manager was full of praise for Steve Perrin's performance, and said that he had never seen Terry Glynn, who missed the team's best chances, look so despondent after the game.

Clinical

His opposite number, Mick Loughton, said that he was apprehensive about the slope before the match. "But in the end I told them just to go out and play. I thought we adapted better to the conditions."

The Chelmsford boss admitted that not many scoring chances had come their way and described the goals as "clinical finishing of the highest quality".

Looking ahead to the second round encounter at Gillingham, he said: "That's a bonus for us now. We've got to look forward to it and enjoy it, as we've got nothing to lose.

"We'll give them a run for their money. With a bit of application and luck, who knows what might happen?"
