

Blues' critics can make comments in person

CRITICS of Wycombe Wanderers have two meetings at which to air their complaints at Loakes Park tonight (Friday).

First, at 7pm, the club have called a special meeting to discuss their decision to disband the reserves team at the end of the season.

This meeting was forced on them under the club rules, after 20 members had signed a document asking for the matter to be reviewed.

Comments

Only club members and season ticket holders can attend the meeting, which Mac Everett, prime mover of the campaign to save the reserves, hopes will force the club to reverse their decision.

Then an hour later — at 8pm — there will be an open meeting at which all fans and those interested in the club can put their comments to the committee.

The only matters the club will not discuss are the Reserves (already debated at the previous meeting) and details about wages.

Otherwise, every subject from the sacking of Mike Keen to the problems with the pitch and financial policies can come up for discussion.

This "clear the air" meeting will be chaired by Michael Knox, sports editor of the Bucks Free Press, through whose columns many of the fans' grievances have been raised. Now here's a chance to put them in person.

Events off the field are almost overshadowing those on it, but most Blues' fans are aware that if the Wycombe Reserves draw or win at Hendon Reserve tomorrow night, they will be champions of the Suburban League North Division.

Crucial

Tim Anning's men could be supplemented by Mark Hill, the first team full-back who has been out for more than a month with a groin strain, and is hoping to get fit for the Hitachi Cup final the following weekend.

Meanwhile the first team will be playing a quick return match at home to Croydon tomorrow afternoon. In a poor game at Croydon last Saturday, Blues won with a goal by Terry Glynn.

Then on Monday came a 2-1 home defeat against Slough, for whom Howard Kennedy scored the crucial second goal. Henry Pacquette replied for laboured Wycombe in injury time.

Steve Perrin missed both these matches with influenza, but is expected to be back this weekend.
