

Still they come

WANDERERS poor showing in the Conference this season certainly hasn't kept the paying public away from Loakes Park, and a recent survey shows them to be at the forefront of an attendance boom.

Conference gates are now at their highest level since the league was formed in 1979, and showing a 36 per cent increase on last season.

Lincoln City and Barnet not surprisingly head the averages with 2926 and 2502 respectively, but Wycombe are a healthy eighth with 1375 and have topped the 1000 mark for every match. The overall average for the Conference is 1246.

When Wanderers played in the old Gola League two seasons ago, they were averaging around 800 supporters per game, so things are on the up and up in at least one department.

The only clubs to have lost supporters from last year are Dagenham and Enfield, while Weymouth lead the way with a staggering 110 per cent increase on last season's gates, moving from an average of 890 to 1872.
