

Best is yet to come says Jim

BLUES boss Jim Kelman was, not surprisingly, delighted with the debut display of his latest signing Nicky Evans.

After watching the ex-Barnet man dispose of Boston with two clinically finished strikes he enthused, "Nicky said afterwards that the first cross had goal written all over it. It was a fine move and a good team effort.

"But the second goal was incredible - a real individual effort. At this club we normally make our goals through teamwork. We don't score many like that and it's clear that Nicky will add a new dimension to our game with that kind of finishing.

"Now we have got a six footer who can get up well and hold the ball up for the rest of our front men and wide men to move on to.

"Once he gets used to playing with the rest of the team he will be tremendous. We have got that to look forward to."

"I was disappointed with Boston's approach on Saturday. When we went up there earlier in the season they played some nice football and I was expecting more of the same - but they surprised me. Some of their tactics were a bit crude and there were a lot of unnecessary fouls. Apart from Hamill on the right they had very little to offer.

"I also always try to be positive about officials but it is difficult when a lot of shirt-pulling and the like goes unpunished and John Granville is penalised for taking too many steps when he is trying to keep the play moving.

"We were a little slow starting in both halves - perhaps it was a bit of a hangover from the Hyde game. All the same it was a nice way to come back from last week's disappointments."

● Injury problems at the club are currently at a minimum, with Keith Barrett and Lawrence Osborne both expected to have Capital League outings this week and Andy Kerr now out of plaster and expected to be back in training within two weeks.

● Wanderers central defender Kevin Day signed for Conference rivals Aylesbury United on Saturday for a £6000 fee.
