

THE Blues struggled through another goalless week to add one more point to their Conference total.

On Wednesday night they travelled to Welling United and came home with a goalless draw.

They were not so lucky on Saturday, when Darlington continued their maximum point run by beating the Blues at Loakes Park by the only goal.

At Welling, Wycombe more than matched the home team in defence and in the centre, but simply couldn't get the ball in the back of the net.

Blues boss Jim Kelman said: "We are playing very tight — very tight indeed — which shows in the fact we conceded only one goal against Darlington, whereas they are beating other teams by three or four goals.

"On Wednesday night, we played very well, but we just didn't take our chances. The best chance of the match fell to Dave Carroll in the latter stages of the match, but he failed to put it away."

"Mark West scored a lot of goals for Wycombe last season, but he just can't find the target at the moment, which is quite worrying for us," he said.

Steve's game dilemma

IF Wanderers succeed in their quest for a place in the fourth division next season, then new signing Steve Wicks could face a problem.

After he suffered a back injury while at Chelsea, Steve was pronounced unable to play League football again and received a payout from the players' insurance scheme.

Steve was pronounced to have Permanent Total Disablement which means a player can never play League football again.

Steve said: "If Wycombe go up. I can't play, it's as simple as that.

"But no-one would be happier than me if they did take the title, I'm just happy to be playing for them, because they are a great club.

"I injured my back during training at Chelsea."
