

Kerr is a hit with Wycombe fans

Report by Pete Lansley

ANDY Kerr has received your vote as Wycombe Wanderers' 1989/90 Player of the Year.

In the formalities preceding Monday's farewell game chairman Ivor Beeks also received a model of Loakes Park.

Dave Carroll, who picked up the season's final Player of the Month award, was one of the players Kerr thought might pip him for the prestigious title.

"Dave Carroll's come on a lot, especially towards the end of the year, and John Granville's another who's played in most of the games."

Andy is modest about his prestigious achievement, won on the strength of his durable displays at the heart of the Blues defence.

"It does partly come as a surprise.

"I don't know whether I won because I'm one of the few players who played in nearly all the games or because I played well."

Now Kerr is already looking forward to continuing his sterling consistency on the new pitch next season.

"We all went down the other week to Adams Park.

"The pitch could make all the difference. Every time we've had a decent pitch we've done really well, so I think it will help.

"Sad? Yes and no. It's one of the few grounds where your fans can move around the ground, and when you've got your own fans behind the goal it's nice. "The slope has never gone to our advantage, even though we've been the home team."
