

Cry of foul over ticket details

I WAS very annoyed, although not entirely surprised, to read the ticket details for the forthcoming opening Wycombe Wanderers match at Adams Park.

I was annoyed to read that not only do you have to buy a ticket to the second match as well, but also there is no discount for children. This means that to bring my two children along I will have to pay £21 to watch a pre-season friendly match.

This also means that I will effectively have to waste three tickets to the Southampton game as we cannot attend it. I am sure many other fans are in a similar situation, or more likely simply don't want to attend the second game.

Perhaps the directors are so detached from reality that they either cannot understand this attitude or simply cannot bear to tolerate it.

The reason that I was not surprised was because I have heard many people speak of the current directors as having their priorities wrong, and the fans being fairly low on their list, but until now I have had only limited evidence of this.

Thanks to their penny-pinching, selfish attitude many people are going to start off this new era in the club's history with a very bitter taste in their mouths. In some ways I hope that many fans boycott this rip-off, but I doubt it as this is a very important event to the large, loyal Blues following, and I am sure that they won't let the directors' attitude ruin it for them.
