

It's time Charles Mann played fair

I CONSIDER the remarks by Mann on Friday in connection with the incident adjacent to Wycombe Wanderers football ground on Bank Holiday Monday were offensive.

I do not live near the ground but I should think that there must be some long term supporters of the club who do, but think the club should have found a site more suitable and convenient for all concerned.

I first supported the Wanderers long before the Second World War and, in fact, was at Highbury to see them win the Amateur Cup (1931).

For Charles Mann to describe in print respectable people as moaning minnie's is demeaning, to say the least! I feel he should apologise to those residents of Sands.

PETE LANSLEY reports

A STORM in a coke can is brewing at the Adams Park teabars following an accusation of profiteering from a Wanderers supporter of 60 years standing.

Ronald Ford, 70, of Maidenhead, is aghast that a can of Panda Pops is costing him 50p at Blues' home matches.

Wycombe sell refreshments through a franchise, Wycombe Sports Catering, who therefore decide the price.

"Everyone pays £4 at the gate, and they deserve better service," said Ford. "It is scandalous that that they profiteer to such an extent."

Ford cited the example of Chesham United, who sell plastic bottles of Coca-Cola at 30p. Chesham, who are supplied by Rodwells of Tring, have volunteers running two of their three refreshment bars around The Meadow ground.

Brian Lee, Blues' general manager, said the matter is being investigated.
