Debate over Blues keeper continues

Dear Mr O'Neill,

AS A long-time ardent supporter of the Wanderers, although currently having lived in Surrey for the past ten years plus, I have continued to follow the Blues both home and away ever since 1981.

With reluctance, but passion for the club, I have to correspond on the present goalkeeping situation.

In my humble opinion, the present incumbent is far below the standards required in the unofficial Fifth Division.

It is quite evident to many supporters that he has made a number of fateful errors to date this season, even before the match at Colchester.

His total lack of command of his penalty area — even his own goalline — is almost unbelievable at this level, but obviously this has been partly obscured by the earlier form of Glyn Creaser and Andy Kerr playing in front of him, and he was not required to really prove his worth.

At the moment however without Andy Kerr in the side, his limitations have been very cruelly exposed.

I and many other supporters feel that if the club is to sustain a challenge for the league title this season, something must be done in that department.

Chuck Moussaddik did not let the side down in his few outings last season, and I think that, provided he is fit, he must be given his chance before it is too late.

I appreciate that you are the man in charge, but as a fervent supporter I feel I cannot let the matter rest. It is quite obvious that in this case it was money ill spent, and after watching Kevin Shoemake of Kettering in the cup replay, I know who I would have preferred in the Wycombe colours this season.

I sincerely hope that you will not be offended by my letter, but considered it to be significant to send it at this point.

I would be very grateful for your respected views on the matter.
