

Kerr gets invite to shine

ANDY Kerr has sufficiently impressed Premier League club Wimbledon to be asked back for a second week of trials.

The 26-year-old Blues defender trained at Plough Lane last week, and played in two reserve team friendlies.

With manager Joe Kinnear and the Dons' first team returning from a pre-season tour yesterday, Kerr was eager to make his mark.

Kerr played in two 3-1 victories last week, over Baldock on Wednesday and against Leatherhead on Saturday.

Sharp

He told Midweek: "I felt good. But the rest of the players have been training for three weeks more than I have. It would take me time to be as sharp as them — but I know I could do it."

Last Monday, Kerr enjoyed training with the first team, marking the likes of Robbie Earle, Terry Gibson, and recent signing Dean Holdsworth.

"It was great. I love full-time training," said Kerr, adding: "I presume they are just waiting for the first team manager to have a look at me."

Dennis Greene, meanwhile, returned from a similar week's trial with Dundee United on Saturday.
