

Wycombe looking at seventh heaven

Preview by CLAIRE NASH

WYCOMBE Wanderers' current purple patch of form is set to see them equal their seven-match unbeaten runs at the start, and during the middle of, last season.

If the Blues beat Yeovil tonight (ko 7.45pm), they will emulate their feats of wins on the trot as well as extend their lead at the top of the Vauxhall Conference.

And it was Yeovil's 1-0 defeat at Huish Park last March which kick-started Blues into their second seven-match victory sequence of the season, until it was brought to an end by Macclesfield.

O'Neill is loath to compare the way his side is presently playing with their form of last season.

He put their recent emphatic scorelines down to their scoring goals earlier on in games. "We've attempted to try and be positive, we're going at teams and while the pitches remain in decent shape we're playing well."
