

Wanderers fans are coming clean

ENTRIES are flooding in to Backchat's great contest to find a clean song for Wycombe Wanderers fans.

Lyricists have deluged my postbag ever since I joined forces with manager Martin O'Neill to come up with a new chant for Adams Park. Police banned Blues' fans from singing blue songs.

I've had variations on several famous tunes and I'll print a selection next week of the best and worst. Meanwhile, more clean songs should be sent to Backchat, Bucks Free Press Midweek, Gomm Road, High Wycombe, HP13 7DW. Or ring me on (0494) 521212.

WANDERERS' fanatic Shaun Swinburn queued all night to make sure he bagged a precious ticket for Sunday's FA Cup game with West Bromwich Albion.

Shaun and his brother-in-law Daniel Cowing, aged 13 of Brackley, slept in a car parked outside Adams Park. They were the first two in a queue of thousands.

Shaun, a former Marlow policeman who now lives in Milton Keynes, said: "I got there at 1.30am. When we queued I saw a lot of friends and they said: 'You must be mad'."

But Shaun says he got a good night's sleep and, most importantly, got his hands on a cup ticket.

Shaun, 26, an avid fan, has seen all Wycombe's games except a couple of away fixtures this season and was determined not to miss Sunday's match against West Bromwich Albion.

But there were still 20 tickets left over from Sunday, which were immediately snapped up yesterday.

Club chairman Ivor Beeks said: "Everybody who queued for a ticket on Sunday, got a ticket and that is exactly what we were after," explained Mr Beeks, who had received some abusive calls prior to Sunday's sale as fans clamoured for tickets. "I am not too pleased with some of the calls I have had but I don't want to publicise it," said Mr Beeks.
