

Blues are bookies' favourites for title

WYCOMBE Wanderers are already favourites to win Division Three, according to the bookmakers.

Leading football bookies Surrey Racing currently have Wycombe at 11-2 to take the title and gain automatic promotion to Division Two, before their first season in the Football League has even begun.

Having Martin O'Neill as manager, Blues' firm financial footing, their number of quality players, and swelling crowds on the terraces, are reasons why they look attractive contenders, explained a spokesman.

"They are a good team. It is unusual that they have favourites just after being promoted. But they are a good choice," he said.

But Wanderers secretary John Goldsworthy is not convinced, just yet. "I would not put my money on it before a ball has even been kicked. In my opinion it is a false figure. We have never been in this division before."

Andy is a head of the field for job

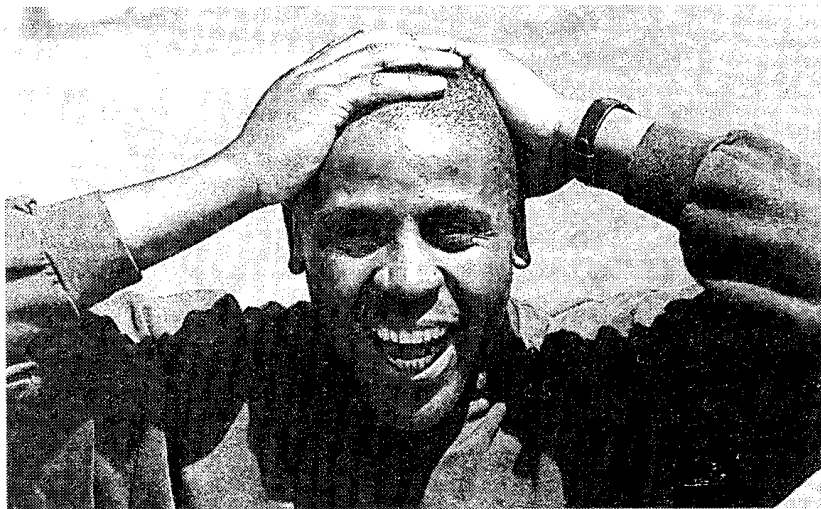

I'VE always known Wycombe Wanderers star Andy Kerr is a cut above the rest as a defender, but his trim new look is bound to strike fear into opposing forwards.

Backchat spies shocked me by telling me he'd suddenly become almost bald. This left me wondering what on earth had happened to Kerr's hair.

At first I thought it had fallen out because he's worried about whether or not he gets a new contract now Wycombe are in the Football League?

After all, it's a case of hair today, gone tomorrow for so many players, and getting a full-time job with the club might be a close shave for some.

But Andy – surely a cert for a long contract – says he had his hair cut to make it more manageable.

Where's it gone? Andy's new hairdo will scare the League
