

Supporters prepare for Coventry cup match

Wycombe's fans: In full voice on Saturday

WANDERERS' have revised their original statement that the Coca-Cola Cup second-round, first-leg tie at Coventry City is all-ticket.

Supporters can travel up to Highfield Road on Wednesday, September 22 (ko 7.45pm) on spec, but they will be sitting among Coventry fans.

Sell-out

Wycombe have an allocation of 2,800 seats, priced £10 each (no concessions) which went on sale on Sunday. The club is expecting a quick sell-out of tickets which are being sold on a one for one basis.

"I would advise any Wycombe Wanderers supporters to buy tickets here because they will be sitting with Wycombe people. If they go on the night, they will be sitting with Coventry fans, it's up to them," said Mark Austin, Blues' marketing and commercial manager.

He believes around 4,000 to 5,000 Wycombe supporters will travel to the tie.

Around 5,000 to 6,000 watched the West Bromwich Albion FA Cup game at The Hawthorns last year.

There are no seat tickets for general sale for the home leg on Tuesday, October 5 (ko 7.45pm).

This game is all-ticket. Vice-presidents, season ticket holders, league-line members and general-sale tickets go on sale this Sunday.

Winterbottom gets a taste of Adams Park

SIR Walter Winterbottom witnessed Wanderers' 1-1 draw with Gillingham on Saturday.

Winterbottom, the director of coaching and manager of England from 1946 until 1962, was invited to Saturday's match by Wycombe patron Jack Adams.

"The crowd really felt that Wycombe Wanderers didn't do themselves justice," said Sir Winterbottom.

Winterbottom, who lives in Surrey, has been a family friend of the Adams' for 40 years.

He knew Jack's dad Frank, who gave Loakes Park to the club and was also on the international committee.
