

DoE defeats Adams Park development

A GOVERNMENT inspector has refused to back Wycombe Wanderers chairman Ivor Beek's bid to allow development around Adams Park.

Mr Beek's objected to the fact Wycombe District Council had designated the area around the club as protected green belt land.

But a report submitted by a Department of the Environment planning inspector has backed the council's stance.

The report follows a £50,000, five-month inquiry into the town's local plan last year. The inspector, Ian McPherson, supported many of the council's policies including proposals to pedestrianise town centre areas.

Fun day goes off with a splash

WYCOMBE Wanderers' skipper Terry Evans got soaking wet at a fun day - but it was all in a good cause.

The wet sponge and stocks were all part of an event at the pub, off the A40 at Holtspur, and were a welcome relief from the relentless hot weather.

Organiser Hayley Edwards, 19, said: "It was a lovely day. We had a good time."

Fewer people turned up than expected as the holiday season set in but plans are going ahead for similar day in September.

Money raised will go towards Cancer Research.
