

Bingham approves

EX-Northern Ireland manager Billy Bingham thought his old team captain Martin O'Neill would be too impatient to become a successful football manager.

But he has been happily proved wrong by his former charge.

Bingham cast a critical eye over O'Neill's managerial prowess when he attended last Saturday's clash between Wycombe Wanderers and Blackpool, where he is now in charge of football development.

He said after the game: "I truthfully thought Martin would be too impatient to be a manager. He is impatient, I'm impatient, it's a weakness managers have. I was surprised when Martin went into management, but he has surprised me again by being good at it."

Bingham believed Blackpool were a more skilful side than Blues last weekend, however, and thought his team should have won the match at Bloomfield Road which Wycombe won 1-0 last December.
