

Wycombe are peerless at Wembley

And another one: Jason Cousins and Chuck Moussaddik milk Blues' latest Wembley win

FORGET all those Premiership high fliers – nobody can match Wycombe Wanderers' Wembley record.

Over the last five years, we've played 11 matches at Wembley and won every one of them.

The run began against Kidderminster in the FA Trophy Final and continued this week with our London Five-a-Side Championship win over Luton.

Only QPR (1971/72) and Millwall (1978/79) have managed to equal our feat of winning the London Five-a-Side tournament in successive seasons.

The win provides a unique challenge for Martin – you've got to stay now and ensure we are the first club to complete the hat-trick.

Maybe we should forget about building the new stand at Adams Park and switch all our matches to Wembley – I'm sure some members of Wycombe District Council would be delighted to see us go.

Publicity

The club continues to win valuable nationwide publicity for the town. But there still seems to be precious little support in return.

I'm sure many councillors would rather see the club return to the lower reaches of the Conference with crowds hovering around the thousand mark.

Enough whingeing, though.

Congratulations to Martin and the boys for bringing home another piece of silverware for Ivor to polish and cherish.

It was great to see Dave Carroll pick up the Player of the Tournament award, and what a way for Chuck to finish before jetting out to play in Dallas – could he be crowned the King of Indoor Keepers?

A VIEW FROM THE STAND

Another titbit from the five-a-sides has come to my notice, too.

I understand David Seaman approached Simon Garner at Wembley for some special coaching. He was very impressed by how Simon always managed to reach the bar – allegedly.

■ Ron Barnett's thoughts on Blues completing a Wembley Five-a-Side tournament double are his last before signing off for a short summer break from his regular weekly fan's viewpoint on Wycombe Wanderers. He will be back, on an ad hoc basis through the summer, with his impressions on news from the Wycombe camp. His weekly column will return when the football season starts again in August.
