

Senda gets big chance at the Dell

Big break: Daniel Senda

FOURTEEN-year-old Daniel Senda is going places on his trail towards a professional football career, after joining up with Premiership club Southampton.

Senda, of Marlow, has been signed up by the south-coast club to join their School of Excellence, as part of the Southampton schoolboys' team.

The youngster, who also plays for the Marlow Royals Football Club, trains with his Southampton club-mates on Monday nights in Slough.

His new club boasts a talented first team, as well as youth network, with star players of the likes of England international Matthew Le Tissier and former Liverpool goalkeeper Bruce Grobbelaar.

Southampton mostly recruit their young players from the southern Home Counties, but made an exception when Senda was spotted and taken on at the Centre of Excellence last month.
