

Adams Park site visit is ludicrous

IT is ludicrous that the district council needs a site visit to Adams Park before making a decision on the proposal for a new stand.

Surely members of Wycombe District Council are aware of where the Blues ground is and what it looks like.

If they don't even know that by now it is a worrying thought that they make vital decisions for the town.

Members of the council planning applications panel met on Wednesday night to make a decision on the proposal for a 5,000-seater stand at Wycombe Wanderers.

But the only decision they could make between them was to defer the decision.

As one councillor pointed out at the meeting, the council boasts it is one of the club's biggest supporters in an advert in the Blues' programme.

Townsfolk are, by a large majority, in favour of the new stand. We understand the concerns of nearby residents in Sands but Wycombe needs the Wanderers and the Wanderers need a new stand. It's as simple as that.

So why don't local worthies stop creating obstacles and give the go-ahead for the stand or the club could face expulsion from the league?
