
Shareholders ready to vote down reduction

WYCOMBE Wanderers shareholders have warned the club's bosses they want a good explanation as to why the number of shares should be reduced – or they will vote against them.

A crunch meeting, when holders will vote on whether to limit shares from the current amount of 500 to 250, is due to take place on Monday night.

Bob Officer of the Independent Supporters Club, said that people were keen to hear the club's reasoning behind the proposal and ready to take a stand against it if they don't like what they hear.

He added: "We cannot see any valid reason why they want to reduce the number and it will be interesting to see what they have to say.

"We will listen to it, but if they're not happy the shareholders could vote it down, so history could be in the making.

"Whatever decision is made has to be one which will benefit the fans, after all it is the supporters that make the club."

Wycombe Wanderers have refused to comment on the proposal, insisting it is a matter that should be discussed first by the shareholders.

However, their attitude and the proposal itself has incensed many supporters, because the club constantly insists the fans have an important place in the set up at Wanderers.

Monday night's meeting is for shareholders only and not open to the public.
