

Blues host Cup battle

A CROWD of 2,253 watched Woking beat Enfield 2-1 in their FA Cup second-round replay at Adams Park on Tuesday.

The match was played at Wycombe because of building work at Woking's Kingfield ground.

Former Blues stars Steve Thompson and Andy Kerr were expected to do battle for Woking and Enfield respectively.

■ Blues youth team's South East Counties League game at home to Wimbledon was postponed on Saturday because of the weather.

■ Wycombe Wanderers Independent Supporters Club is holding a Christmas Party at the Trades and Social Club, Queens Road, tomorrow, starting at 8pm. Tickets are £3 (£2 non members).

Moussaddik returns from tour to find he's Chuck-ed

CHUCK Moussaddik left Wycombe Wanderers last week because he was made painfully, and expensively, aware that he was no longer wanted, said the Moroccan international this week.

The popular reserve goalkeeper says it cost him £2,000 to return to England from an international tour to find out that he would not be replacing out-of-favour Paul Hyde for last Saturday's game at Wrexham, and that he was surplus to requirements.

"I feel as though I have been messed around. It cost me a lot of money to come back. Obviously I wasn't happy when I was told that a 20-year-old goalkeeper who has never played in the league was going to replace me. I felt like Alan Smith wanted me to say that I had had enough.

"The truth is I have had enough. I don't think I've been given a chance. I don't think I let the club down when I played in the friendly against Cambridge and against Peterborough in the league. This was a chance for me to get a run in the side," he said.

The 25-year-old former Wimbledon and Tottenham trainee, who had been on a month-to-month contract since the start of the season, said he felt sorry for Hyde. "I feel that Paul has not been treated fairly," he said.

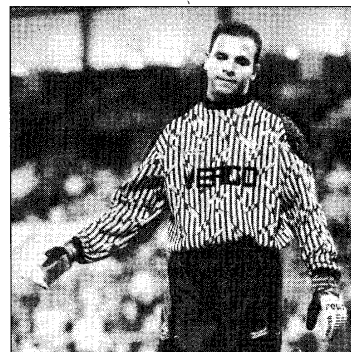

The hero of Wanderers' consecutive Wembley Five-A-Side wins added that when he assessed the situation, the bottom line for him, after five years of usually sitting on the sidelines, was that he simply didn't enjoy being around the club anymore.

"I know the club is going through a change, but it just isn't as much fun in training.

"I spent last weekend thinking that my five years at the club have counted for nothing. I had a great time in the London Five-A-Sides but I always hoped to get a chance to prove myself in the first team."

Moussaddik cut short a two-week tour with Morocco in Europe and America to return home. He now hopes to get involved with the new five-a-side league in the States. He was invited to play there at the start of this season. But he was unable to get a work permit.
