

From the editor's chair

Jokes lift Blues from Wanderers' fans

TWO entries have so far poured in to my Wycombe Wanderers Getting Beaten Joke Competition.

You will have noticed that Blues actually managed to win a game at last on Saturday.

I firmly believe that my joke contest should take the credit for this victory, for it gave them the kick up the backside they needed.

Reader Ian Gutteridge, of Gypsy Lane, High Wycombe, sent me the following gags:

Question: How are Wycombe Wanderers like hilly countryside?

Answer: They both have their ups and downs.

Q: Why should Alan Smith get caught for speeding?

A: Because it's the only way he's going to get three points.

Q: Why do Wycombe

Wanders play in Blue?

A: Because it matches their performance.

Q: What do cyclists and Wycombe Wanderers have in common?

A: They both find it easier to go down than up.

Steve Maguire of Mendip Way, Downley, perhaps summed up the situation best in a letter on the subject (See Letters, page 7).

He said: "I applaud your attempt to cheer up Wycombe Wanderers' supporters, but I think you will find that original or even funny football jokes are as rare as a Steve McGavin goal."

● Please keep on sending your Wanderers Getting Beaten Jokes to Editor's Chair, The Star, Gomm Road, High Wycombe, Bucks, HP13 7DW.

Funny footy jokes are as rare as McGavin's goals

I APPLAUD your attempt to cheer up Wycombe Wanderers' supporters, but I think you will find that original or even funny football jokes are as rare as a Steve McGavin goal.

Some fans do consider the club's proposed new kit a bit of a joke, but it is rumoured to have been designed to help the players be more accurate with their passing. The current trend for replica shirts being worn on the terraces is, apparently, the cause of most of the wayward passing at Wycombe games at the moment.

Players hit the ball towards what they thought was a team mate, only to find it ending up in the terracing.

This problem should stop when the proposed new kit comes in, as surely no supporter in their right mind will be wearing this garish outfit. Therefore the players will have no problem picking out who they should be passing the ball to.

Steve Maguire
Mendip way
Downley
High Wycombe