

LETTER

Stop nit-picking and get behind the team

HAVING just received my copy of your paper and finding yet another whinging letter from another so-called Wanderers supporter without the guts to put their names to these pathetic pieces, I must ask why bother to be interested in the club if such trivial things bring out pen and paper.

Where is the passion for what has been achieved by the club and the directors. Look back to the times we played the Walton and Hershams, Harlows, and other clubs that were going to achieve so much every time they had a run in the FA Cup. Where are they now?

If we can come from playing Clapton at the Spotted Dog; achieve Football League status and promotion to Division Two, getting to the Premiership cannot be any more difficult than what has been attained in the last few years.

We cannot be promoted every year or win every game. There should, though, be full-house signs for games with the fantastic ground we now have. So if the whingers stop moaning away and real supporters realise just what has, and can still be achieved, with no help from the local council, it must be said the club can go on to even greater things. Let's have some passion for the Blues and I'll be buying a shirt.
