

Half time trouble at the New Den

AN INDEPENDENT VIEW

FOLLOWING the disappointment of the result at Millwall particularly after our first half performance, I for one would like to know what John Gregory's half-time team talk was about.

In my opinion, and I know several others who think the same, it went downhill second half.

The top of the league seems to be well and truly sown up, and the most we can hope for on current form will be mid-table obscurity.

Following my last column, when I talked about people buying football shirts and why, in my opinion, young people in the town are wearing premiership shirts and not Wycombe shirts, I was amazed by the response I received from people.

So many people agreed with what I had said.

● In one of the national newspapers last Saturday there was an article regarding Paul Hyde's autistic twin boys and how he is trying to raise £14,000 so his sons can go to the USA to receive specialist treatment.

WWISC would like to help Paul and his family in this task, we will therefore be placing a box on our table at the Watford game for all supporters at Wycombe to make a contribution.

Finally, let us look forward to the Christmas programme.

A point against Watford would be a good start, and three against Southend would be even better.

WWISC are running a coach to Southend on December 28, so ring me on (01494) 450622 to book a seat.

Mohan back Boxing Day

NICKY Mohan comes back into contention following suspension for Boxing Day's all-ticket derby against leaders Watford.

The visitors will be without former Tottenham striker Ronnie Rosenthal, who is out injured.

The Hornets have more than twice as many points as the Blues, winning more games away than Blues have won at home.

John Cornforth's hamstring injury looks set to rule him out of another clash.
