

Rhino keeps Blues smiling

AN INDEPENDENT VIEW

IT makes a change to watch Tele-tex and find Wanderers on the first page and not languishing near the bottom of the second.

John Gregory's departure does not seem to have had the effect many thought it would – Keith Ryan on his own seems to be proving that.

The remainder of our games, at least on paper are difficult, but at least we have a cushion, which nobody thought we would have a month ago.

While we all wish John luck at Villa we have to look to the future and hope that the management structure that Wanderers will have next season is best for the club, and that if Neil Smillie doesn't get the job, a so-called big name doesn't get it just for being well known. Many of the fans would like someone with at least a fleeting Wanderers history.

WWISC have arranged a speaker from the Kick it Out Campaign to attend a meeting at Adams Park on April 9. The idea of this meeting is to organise an anti-racism day at Adams Park. If you are interested in attending please ring me.

Thanks to those fans and players who attended the quiz night to raise funds for Paul Hyde's autistic sons. A write-up will be published in the next Wanderer fanzine on March 28.

WWISC have been approached by ex-player Tim Langford. His son Adam needs a bone marrow transplant, Tim wants to take Adam to Disney World. WWISC will do all they can to help Adam. If anyone wants to make a donation then please contact me on (01494) 450622.

Cousins is out

WREXHAM v WYCOMBE

A guide to tomorrow's Division Two clash

JASON Cousins will miss tomorrow's match at Wrexham and next week's clash against Bristol City through suspension.

He was given a two match ban by the FA after accumulating eight bookings this season.

Mo Harkin could come back into contention after recovering from the virus which kept him out last Saturday and John Cornforth is available again after returning from Peterborough.
