

Club misses the race day

AN INDEPENDENT VIEW

WYCOMBE Wanderers Independent Supporters Club held an anti-racism meeting at Adams Park last week but no-one from our favourite football club bothered to turn up.

A co-ordinator from the Kick It Out anti racism campaign was our guest speaker. The meeting was attended by various members of the local community and with such an important issue being discussed it was disappointing that the football club did not send a representative.

It is clear that people have suffered racism at Adams Park and it cannot be an issue that the club can avoid.

Football fans should be a representation of the local community and it is clear that it isn't at Adams Park, and this issue needs to be resolved.

Whatever some bigots may feel, we live in a multi-racial society and our game – players and fans – should reflect that.

Onto happier matters, four points over the Easter holidays brought us up the table but things are still not clear cut with so many teams in contention to avoid the drop.

We've got to continue to get as many points as possible.

The game at Oldham can only be described as being pretty dire, although the chanting from the Wycombe fans had to be a bonus for the players.

WWISC's Player of the Year will be announced at the final game of the season and members can cast their vote at our table before tomorrow's match.

Stallard out

WYCOMBE v MILLWALL A guide to tomorrow's Division Two match

NEIL Smillie is refusing to accept Wanderers are safe as they entertain Millwall, who have slipped into relegation danger. The Lions have not won in five and have the worst form of all the strugglers.

Their problems increased this week when former England star Andy Gray limped out of a reserve game. Blues have their own worries. Keith Scott has missed training with flu and Mark Stallard is suspended. Paul McCarthy has joined Michael Forsyth on the out-for-the-season list and Steve McGavin (foot) is not match fit.
