

Scott faces long lay-off

KEITH Scott faces a two-month lay-off after dislocating his elbow during Wycombe's 2-1 defeat at Millwall on Saturday.

Substitute Scott had only been on the pitch 101 seconds when he fell awkwardly after clashing with Millwall's matchwinner Scott Fitzgerald in the 89th minute.

Scott was stretchered off and taken to hospital by ambulance – and to make matters even worse Millwall snatched their winner in the four minutes of injury time that was added on for Scott's injury.

Shocked Fitzgerald said: "You could see straight away how bad it was."

Scott's pain

"As soon as he fell over I turned round to him and I could see his arm was twisted the wrong way. It was disgusting. Three or four players had a look and we all had to look away because it was really bad.

"He had his head buried in the grass and I could hear that he was in pain."

Blues boss Neil Smillie said: "He's dislocated his elbow. I don't know how long he's going to be out for."

Smillie will now weight up the situation and says if the injury is as bad as feared he could talk to the chairman about the possibility of bringing in a loan striker.

He said: "I'll have to speak to the chairman about that but in the short term I've got Andrew Baird. He was close to being on the bench today [Millwall] and will figure in the future.

Scott's injury was part one of a nightmare double whammy in the last five minutes at the New Den. Blues were heading for a 1-1 draw when goalkeeper Martin Taylor blundered to gift Millwall their match winner.
