

Time for Blues to get real

WHEN Wycombe Wanderers narrowly avoided relegation in successive seasons it was obvious to all, except apparently the club management, that the team required a radical overhaul if it was to survive in an even stronger second division.

Instead we witnessed officials anxious to re-sign players clearly past their sell-by dates in order that they could rejoin the first team squad of journeymen.

The club even had the effrontery to suggest that Wanderers might be promoted or at the very least gain a play-off place, presumably in an attempt to pull the wool over the eyes of prospective season ticket holders.

As one of these unfortunate souls I have so far suffered five league performances which would shame a non-league club.

However, according to Alan Parry's pronouncement in the Bucks Free Press, we should not express negative reactions. How patronising!

Belatedly the club is attempting to remedy the situation by introducing loan players, the return of others for a fee higher than that for which they were sold, or who have not made the grade elsewhere.

Papering over cracks which appeared long ago will achieve little, particularly when accompanied by a management team devoid of charisma or discernible tactics.

I have long felt that Wanderers are a second division club with a Vauxhall Conference mentality and without drastic restructuring that is where we could be heading.

If Ivor Beeks and his fellow directors do not possess the acumen to enable the club to progress, they should cease the pretence of a champagne club with ambition and accept that little positive will occur on a lemonade budget.

Please hand over to someone with money and imagination before it is too late.

Brian P Hughes
Plomer Hill
Downley

Fans have a right to opinion

FOLLOWING Alan Parry's comments in his column in the Bucks Free Press on October 2 and further comments in the match day programme on October 3, I felt compelled to write to you to express my concerns over his knack of using every possible opportunity to have a pop at Wycombe Wanderers Independent Supporters Club and its members.

What Mr Parry seems to continually fail to remember is that members of WWISC are supporters of Wycombe Wanderers and many were, even before Mr Parry had heard of the team.

While he was, no doubt, watching Liverpool – as he seems to constantly want to remind us – many members of WWISC were stood on the terraces at Loakes Park.

His continual side swiping at genuine supporters is getting tiresome – yes Mr Parry, both myself and Nigel were at Colchester to clap the team off the pitch.

Mr Parry does not have to spend his hard earned cash to watch the Wanderers. He did not have to save up over the summer to purchase a season ticket, yet he has the audacity to tell the paying public at Adams Park they they should be happy and not moan about the current situation.

Most members of WWISC attend more games, especially away, than some directors do.

It's about time Mr Parry stopped this personal vendetta he has against myself and WWISC. It wasn't so many weeks ago that I agreed with him regarding the boo boys at Adams Park and their complains about Mr Beeks. I notice he never mentioned that in either of his columns.

Sharon Deighton
Chairman,
WWISC