

RIVALS ROCK BLUES

BLUES boss Lawrie Sanchez launched a double-barrelled attack on his players and the fans that booed them off during Saturday's dismal 2-0 defeat at home to bottom club Blackpool.

He blasted his team for their cocksure attitude and then turned on the fans who vented their disappointment by jeering the team off at half time.

He said: "It was an abysmal performance and a very disappointing response from the fans after all we've achieved so far."

But his main anger was directed at his team who underestimated Blackpool and allowed them to stroll to only their second win of the season. The defeat leaves Blues 11th.

Sanchez stormed: "I could have changed all 11 players at half time."

"In my 35 games in charge that's the worst we've been by a mile. Hopefully I'll have to wait another 35 games before I see a performance like that.

"We lacked everything, we couldn't pass the ball, we couldn't hold it up, we couldn't win it."

"I didn't recognise that team, they played like eleven individuals who had never met each other."

"We spoke about this game in the week. It was a banana skin waiting to happen. We all knew it, yet we still slipped up."

But he decided against punishing them with a Sunday training session to iron out their problems.

He said: "I won't be having them in for training on Sunday because I'm not going to let them ruin my weekend any more."
