

Au Revoir to the Fin Hello Bee?

Vieuvel Revoin

WANDERERS gave Finnish striker Justus Vajanne a trial during Wednesday's reserve match against Barnet but it was Bees triallist Vieuvel Revoin and Blues forward Gavin Holligan who caught the eye, while the big Fin flopped.

While Sanchez admitted he's finished with the Fin he would like to have another look at Barnet's big centre half who impressed during the Bees' 2-0 win.

Sanchez said: "He did ok and we might try and look at him again. I don't know anything about him other than that he's on trial with Barnet."

Revoin also caught the eye of reserve team boss Michael Forsyth.

He said: "A centre half has got to be able to head the ball. That's his first job, then he's got to be able to tackle and he did both well. I'd like to have a look at him again."

The towering defender was commanding all afternoon as Wanderers, with the exception of Gavin Holligan, were a poor second.

Holligan, playing his first game since injuring his ankle in training, won his place on the bus to Huddersfield with an all-action display of pace and skill.

He was twice denied in the first half by super stops from Barnet keeper Danny Naisbitt.

Sanchez said: "It was a performance that made you say Wow. He looked very lively and he did things to excite you."

Sanchez used to know Holligan when he was coaching him at Wimbledon but says the forward is a much better player now.

He said: "He's improved a lot since then and learned his craft."

He was the only Blue to emerge with credit from the match against the Conference side's second string.

Forsyth said: "The performance wasn't acceptable. I told the lads Barnet were including a few triallists and that they would be chasing every bit of paper that flew across the pitch to try and earn themselves a contract. They chased everything, they won everything and we got what we deserved."

On the plus side, Martyn Lee came through his first 90 minutes following his hernia op and Ben Townsend came through following his tendonitis injury but there were injuries to Chris Marsh (hamstring) and triallist Lee Canoville.
