

Wanderers plan to debate change to club constitution

WYCOMBE Wanderers will review their constitution again at the end of the season.

New Blues director Mike Greatwood made the announcement in front of more than 100 supporters at the club's fans forum last week and confirmed that a behind the scenes review is already being undertaken.

The decision to review it again was backed up by boss Lawrie Sanchez whose contract expires in 2003.

He says that under the current financial set-up the best the club can hope for is a place in the play-offs behind the division's big money clubs.

He said: "At the end of the season big decisions need to be made. The board will decide which way we want to go.

"We can go the next step but something big needs to happen off the field for that to happen."

Greatwood admitted that discussions are already going on behind the scenes but he has ruled out the possibility of a stock market flotation.

He said: "That's not the way forward for football clubs."

But he admitted things need to change for the club to progress.

He said: "We've got to look at the constitution. Profit and football don't go together.

"Ultimately the only way we are going to raise money at this club is by reviewing the constitution which we are starting to do again."

But he is aware that the club does not want to bring in money at all costs and run the risk of a sugar daddy pulling out later and leaving Wanderers with nothing.

Sanchez said: "At the end of the season it will be crunch time when the board will work out which way we are going."