

Striking a blow for players

THERE'S been a lot of talk about players striking over how much money the players' union are receiving from television rights.

It appears to me that the PFA have got a good point but I hope it doesn't come to industrial action.

I'm a big supporter of the work the PFA do and as far as I'm concerned if the League promised them five per cent they should stick to it.

It's ok for the top players to strike because they can afford to but if we went on strike we wouldn't get paid and we can't afford to do that because we've got mortgages to pay.

I don't agree with the Football League welching on the deal but I'm not in a position where I could afford to strike and I don't want to either.

All I want to do is play and I hope the situation can be resolved by talking because no-one wants strike action.

The only victims would be the players and supporters.

For the players we would miss out on our wages and run the risk of being kicked out of the club for breach of contract and we would also be getting behind on our match fitness.

Surprisingly though we haven't heard anything from the union yet and the last thing Wycombe want is a strike.

We are all on a high after Tuesday's game against Brighton. I thought we really matched them but we've got to make it count by taking three points off all the sides that are below us.

On a personal level, the Brighton game was fantastic. I was playing in the middle of a 4-4-2 and I love it there. The match was as fast as a basketball game but there was so much space out there.

We've set our standards now and we must stick to them without any ifs and buts. We've got some good games coming off starting with Port Vale and then moving onto Bury on Tuesday.

I just hope the lights don't go out on us this time.
