You can't blame storming Sanchez

ACCORDING to reports Wycombe manager Lawrie Sanchez "stormed" out of Boundary Park after the debacle against Oldham Athletic last Saturday and can you wonder at him after Andy Rammell was dismissed for violent conduct a few days after being awarded an extended contract.

It seems the same old story Steve Brown, Michael Simpson and Rammell in turn get banned and now it seems our loan player Richard Walker has caught the bug.

Having supported The Blues for 36 years I cannot remember such a bad record except perhaps two seasons ago, when we just missed being fined.

These mostly petty dismissals not only give the club a bad name, but most probably lose us points with vital players missing important games.

At this moment in time we only have one prolific striker in Rammell, Reading for instance have four. Thousands of pounds laying dormant in the bank don't score goals. To top it all I see in last Friday's Free Press we are advertising for a chief executive, better known as fat cats now.

Several weeks ago I had the pleasure of being escorted around the stadium, in a party of sponsors. I met, I believe, five managers mostly on the commercial side, plus three directors.

Surely another goal-scoring striker is a priority.

Since Martin O'Neill left we have by far the best chance of being in the play-offs, at last.
