Banned: Andy Rammell is sent off at Oldham

ANDY Rammell is kicking himself as he starts a three-match ban tomorrow because he feels he can score in every game.

The veteran striker took his tally to 11 for the season with his double in Saturday's 5-3 win over Brentford, but is now ruled out until Boxing Day following his sending off at Tranmere.

He said: "It was a nice way to go out. I was a bit of an idiot getting sent off and hopefully that's gone a long way to apologising to the lads, the gaffer and the fans."

Rammell will hate being out of the team while they are doing so well.

He said: "It's my own silly fault and it will hurt. I know I'm going to get chances in every game now and I'm a gutted to be missing for three weeks.

"With Darren Currie and Stuart Robbers we're always dangerous. They put quality balls into the box and it's great for the strikers.

"Brentford couldn't cope. We had more crosses in the second half to feed off than we had all last season. It's a good time to be a striker here."

Blues director Alan Parry, writing in last week's programme described the former Walsall forward, who signed a one-year extension to his contract last month, as the best £75,000 the club has spent.
