

Get rich with the Wanderers

BLUES fans can earn themselves some cash and help catapult Wanderers into the first division at the same time, thanks to a ground-breaking scheme unveiled by the club today.

Chief Executive Simon Monkman wants to reward fans who come up with successful money-making schemes by giving them a share of the profits.

He has invited fans to submit their ideas and says if they are profitable he'll give them a cut.

He said: "If it generates another £10,000 a year I don't see why I shouldn't give them a percentage.

"I don't expect something for nothing. People who come up with good suggestions that make us money should be rewarded. We need to give to get."

Monkman has been tasked with increasing revenue for boss Lawrie Sanchez to invest in the team.

He plans to do that by increasing usage of the club's bars, conference rooms and other facilities on non-matchdays and making the club a community resource. He is considering ventures such as bingo in a bid to bring non football folk down to Adams Park.

He said: "I want the club to be the hub of all activities in Wycombe. I'd like to get to the stage where other things happen here that to certain sections of the community are just as important as the football."

He praised club staff and now wants more people to subscribe to the dream of first division football.

He said: "I have never come across a business where so many people have worked so hard with such enthusiasm."

He singled out the club's Football in the Community Scheme for praise and is now looking for the club to reach out to the community in other areas.
