

● Goalkeeper Martin Taylor and striker Andy Rammell are major doubts for next week's pre-season trip to Scotland.

The pair of 35-year-olds both sat out training again this week with calf strains and are struggling to join Thursday's flight for the matches at Ayr on Thursday and Dumbarton on Saturday.

The Blues have got enough cover for Rambo, but with only rookie glovesmen Mark Osborn and Steve Williams in reserve, boss Lawrie Sanchez is now looking at his goalkeeping situation.

He said: "It's a concern to be at this stage of pre-season without my goalkeeper and it is an area I'm looking at, but to be fair to Martin I could count on the fingers of one hand how many games he's missed for us."

Taylor, last year's player of the year, sustained his injury recovering from an exploratory knee op, but the boss was less happy with Rammell – who is the more serious doubt – because he picked up his injury playing tennis.

Sanchez said: "Players get injured in training and you accept it but injuries sustained away from the club for whatever reason are difficult to understand."

● Chief executive Simon Monkman will hold his first supporters surgery on Thursday, August 1, where fans can come in and express their opinions on all aspects of the Adams Park outfit.

Monkman is determined to bring the club closer to its fans by giving them every opportunity to discuss what's right with The Chairboys and what needs improving.

Monkman said: "The supporters of this club are so passionate and I want to hear their suggestions."

His office at Adams Park will be open from 1pm until 5.30pm. Fans can book an appointment in advance or just turn up on the day.

● Wanderers have been asked to waive the money they receive for running their official website and accept a bigger slice of the profits instead.

The Blues have been asked to forget the guaranteed sum they are owed in return for 80 per cent – instead of 50 per cent – of future profits.

The situation could come to a head today when Wanderers and the rest of the League clubs are due to receive their latest £35,000 instalment.

At the moment, Blues are guaranteed £2,000 a month providing that they meet the stringent copy and deadlines requirements, but Wanderers are confident they could earn just as much if the terms of the deal have to change.

Premium TV have asked the League for permission to restructure the FLPTV company which runs the official sites.

Whatever happens, Blues insist the site will get even better. Later this month they are launching a subscription service where, for £34.99 a year, fans will be able to get a daily audio visual service with goals and interviews straight to their computer.

The Chairboys have spent a five figure sum on the project so far, buying digital cameras and their own editing suite.
