

Blues take direct route to success

Darren Currie

DARREN Currie reckons Wanderers new up and at 'em approach will leave second division defences reeling.

The direct style hasn't been universally popular with supporters in the opening two games but 'Ruby' reckons it will give opposition defences a nightmare in the weeks to come.

He said: "We haven't got it quite right yet but it will come and when it does we'll give a few teams a real hiding.

"The gaffer has gone for a little bit more of a direct approach this season rather than playing about in our own half or the middle third.

"He wants us to get the ball forward early and play in their third where we're at our most dangerous and can hurt teams whether it's with free kicks, corners throw-ins etc. Sean and Faulks will score goals.

"We're still adjusting a bit to the new approach, but if in six games' time we're still unbeaten they are going to look like six good points."
