

Blues hand out tickets for disadvantaged children

KIDS could be watching Wycombe Wanderers for free next season thanks to a pioneering new scheme.

A mystery fan has devised a unique scheme where fans, other individuals and local businesses sponsor under-privileged kids to have a season ticket.

The Blues have sold almost 100 of these sponsored season tickets and are now looking to distribute them to disadvantaged and under-privileged children.

And we have teamed up with Wanderers to make sure the tickets, for kids aged under ten, go to the best homes.

If you know of a school, group or foster family that deserve to be involved in the fantastic free ticket giveaway please contact sports editor Dave Peters or sports reporter Joe Slade with your details and nominations.

They will pass all the details onto Wycombe Wanderers who will then distribute the tickets which are valid for all 23 Wanderers' home league matches including the glamour games against Sheffield Wednesday and Queens Park Rangers.

The tickets are for the Family Stand or the terrace and parents will be able to accompany their children at matches by buying an adult ticket for that area.

In addition, to make sure that the scheme is a success, Wanderers directors have also purchased a number of adult season tickets for carers to aid with the caring of children on matchdays.

Blues director Rod Tomlin said: "The supporter mentioned it at a fans forum. He has come up with the idea and promoted it himself. Now we want to make sure that they go to children who really deserve them."

Schools, clubs, groups or foster families wishing to get involved should contact Dave Peters/Joe Slade at The Sports Desk, Bucks Free Press, Gomm Road, High Wycombe HP13 7DW or telephone 01494 755098/7 from Monday to Thursday.
