Wanderers' wide boys are ready to deliver

WANDERERS' quartet of wingers will be playing a real-life game of noughts and crosses this season – with the prize being a place in the first team.

They have been told that the two of them that put in the most amount of crosses will play and the two that have too many noughts in their statistics will be on the bench.

Assistant boss Terry Gibson said: "The players know the score. The two that will play will be the two that put the most crosses in. The manager has told them that and they know what they have got to do.

"We are going to be playing with wingers this season and we need them to be getting good quality balls in the box.

Darren Currie and Jermaine McSparran are currently holding the shirts. They will start tomorrow's league opener against Stockport County after finding a rich vein of form during Wanderers' successful pre-season campaign.

And manager Lawrie Sanchez reckons they hold the key to his side's fortunes this term.

He said: "Jermaine is as quick as anyone in this division and on his day he has proved he can be a handful for Premiership defences and in Darren Currie we have got someone whose technique on the ball is Premiership quality without doubt.

"And if they aren't doing it we have got ready-made replacements in Stuart Roberts and Lewis Cook.

"We've got four good wingers at the club and it is a waste of time having them if we don't make the best use of them."

Currie said: "We're looking forward to the season. All the wide players are. There's competition for places, I know that if I don't get the crosses in I can't expect to play and rightly so."
