

Water joke the club is

CONGRATULATIONS to WWFC, just a single day after reading of their financial crisis in the BFP, they have probably wiped out a large chunk of their debt.

According to the tannoy man at Saturday's game, the club "consulted the club doctor" who confirmed that it was very hot, and that it would be a good idea if we all drank plenty of water.

Small bottles of water were readily available from the refreshment bar at a mere £1.50 per bottle!

In fact, it was the very same product which I had bought from the corner shop on my way to the ground for just 50p.

Indeed, the bottle from the corner shop was an even better deal than I had realised, because it came complete with a lid, which I apparently can't be trusted with inside a football ground.

The Blues were hot on drinks

I WOULD just like to say what an enjoyable experience Saturday afternoon was even apart from the result, which was of course tremendous considering the number of young players we had against a far more experienced Stockport side.

I thought the attitude shown by the club's officials towards the wellbeing of the supporters was spot on. There was always plenty of soft drinks in supply and plenty of staff available to serve which meant each time I bought a drink, I didn't have to queue for more than a minute.

Believe me, this was much appreciated and having heard horror stories from football supporters at other grounds on Saturday, it is not something I take for granted.
