

Macari and Molby throw their hats into the manager's ring

FORMER Manchester United ace and ex-Celtic boss Lou Macari and Liverpool legend Jan Molby are among the big names who have applied for the Wycombe managerial vacancy.

And they are set to be joined by former Wanderers goal machine Keith Scott.

He admitted his interest yesterday and said: "I'm interested in the job and I will go through the proper channels to apply."

Former Bristol City boss and Wolves assistant boss John Ward has also confirmed his wish to manage the club after narrowly missing out a previous time.

He said: I am interested in the job and if they wanted to talk to me I would be happy to talk to them.

"I've made enquiries but not through the football club."

Wanderers midfielder Keith Ryan, who is the fans' choice to replace Sanchez, could also come into the frame.

Fans were chanting for him to take over even when Sanchez was in charge.

He said yesterday: "It's flattering to be linked but it has also been a bit embarrassing and I have tried to keep a low profile.

"I haven't ruled it in and I haven't ruled it out.

"I haven't applied but if the chairman was to ask me to help out in any way I would be happy to do so. In the future I'd love to have a go at management."

Blues midfielder Steve Brown said he is not going to apply, though is not ruling himself out.

He said: "I could be linked with it and there is talk around the town that I could be linked with the Northampton job.

"I'm not putting my hat into the ring for anything. Me and the missus have got more than enough to do sorting out our wedding.

"But I would do anything for this football club. Anything I am asked to do I will do.

"This club has been great to me and it is home to me."
