

Brentford boss offers Blues boss advice

Tony Adams

BRENTFORD boss Wally Downes is the latest manager to offer Tony Adams a helping hand as the former England and Arsenal captain begins life in management.

Downes was speaking after Saturday's 2-1 win against Wanderers when Jay Tabb's 90th minute winner saw Adams' first game as Blues boss end in defeat.

The results left Brentford just two points of a play-off place while Wycombe remain bottom of Division Two.

Downes said: "If he (Adams) wants to ask me anything I am more than happy to tell him about any teams in this division the same as I would to anyone else because he's only just come into it.

"But he'll have his own ideas.

"If he wants some advice there are 91 other managers who will give him some but none of us will be picking up the phone and telling him what to do.

"I think as long as he trusts his own judgment he'll be fine."

Adams has spoken to a number of people, including Arsenal boss Arsene Wenger but said he has to not look to take too much advice but make the decisions himself.
