

Basement Blues on course for record loss

WANDERERS: The Chairboys are set to report a record loss of £527,000 this season.

The bottom-of-the-table Blues have struggled with dwindling attendances as they face up to the prospect of their first ever relegation as a Football League club.

They have also had to pay for three managers this season with Lawrie Sanchez, John Gorman and Tony Adams all holding the hotseat.

Wanderers have spent the last fortnight trying to persuade fans that it is time to change the constitution so that they can get outside investment into the club.

They have held three meetings with the membership over the last 14 days and will make a statement next week about those meetings.

Acting Chief Executive Rod Tomlin said: "I believe change is healthy, constructive and inevitable.

"I think the mood in the meetings has generally been supportive for some sort of change but the form has still to be mapped out.

"We have had a lot of good discussion with the members about the kind of conditions members would want inserting in any changes to the constitution."

Wanderers are now planning to hold more meetings with club sponsors, supporters who have lent the club money in the past and committee members from both supporters clubs.

The three sponsors of a Supporters Trust proposal will also be invited and Wanderers are hoping to make the big change in the summer, but it can only happen if they get the support of 75 per cent of the membership.
