

Blues bus gets bricked

WANDERERS team bus was attacked with bricks as they left Ashton Gate on Tuesday following their 1-1 draw at Bristol City.

An angry horde of City followers waited in the shadows in the park opposite the ground after Jermaine McSporran's 72nd minute equaliser denied them a victory which would have cut Plymouth's lead at the top of the table.

The Wanderers coach avoided the first ambush but was hit with a brick thrown from a bridge in the roads around the ground.

Wanderers have traditionally been a thorn in Bristol's side and they have taken four points off them this season, thrashing them 3-0 at Wycombe in October.

And McSporran appears to be their tormentor in chief. He has scored in both matches against them this season and also nabbed the winner two season ago after Wanderers arrived late after being stuck in traffic chaos on the M4 because of a hostage situation.
