WANDERERS reject Stuart Roberts has launched a stinging attack on former boss Lawrie Sanchez, accusing the new Northern Ireland manager of destroying him as a player and a person.

The former Welsh Under 21 winger lashed out at the manager who splashed out £100,000 to sign him from Swansea two-and-a-half years ago.

He told the Llanelli Star: "Lawrie Sanchez destroyed me as a player and a person.

"It's been hell for my family. They can't get over how I lasted two-and-a-half years at Wycombe."

Roberts rejoined Swansea on a free transfer last month after also failing to impress Sanchez's successors John Gorman and Tony Adams.

He made a total of just two league starts combined under both managers before Tony Adams finally gave up on him and returned him to Swansea on a free transfer.

Roberts was standing by his comments this week.

He said: "When I was there I didn't want to kick up a fuss but when I wasn't there I got people asking me all the time why it didn't work out.

"Everyone was asking me what went wrong and I had to answer them."

And he added of Sanchez: "He made me feel a bad player. It's difficult to take when you're told you're a waste of space. It was a real kick in the teeth. At half time he used to grill players and slaughter them"

"I kept trying in training but putting a smile on my face was hard. I wasn't the same person at Wycombe.

"I've gone backwards as a player since I left Swansea."

Sanchez declined to comment.
