

QPR blame their kit

Clarke Carlisle in the kit

QPR boss Ian Holloway blamed his side's new green and white away strip for their first half no-show at basement side Wycombe Wanderers last week.

The Rs found themselves 2-0 down inside the first 30 minutes and, although they rescued a point with second half goals from Kevin Gallen and Martin Rowlands, Holloway was in no doubt where the blame lay.

He said: "The first half performance was unrecognisable. We had a different colour kit on and maybe my lads didn't realise they had to pass it to the team in green and white.

"We were laughable in the first half. I don't like the green kit. If it was all white it wouldn't be bad. I can't see why we couldn't play in our normal away kit."
