

BOSS: IT'S MEN AGAINST BOYS

Adams' anger as Swindon give his stragglers a lesson

Adamant: Tony Adams says major surgery is needed to turn his relegated team into winners again

TONY Adams launched a stinging attack on his second division down-and-outs as they crashed 3-0 at home to Swindon Town.

He said that the players who have taken Wanderers down to the third division have little chance of bringing them back up and admitted that he has got a massive job on his hands rebuilding the squad in the summer.

He fumed: "I've got a hell of a job to do here. I need players with passion and I didn't see too much of that."

"It was men against boys. They were better than us in every department and it has been like that all season."

Adams had offered his relegated team the last four games of the season to persuade him they were worth new contracts for next season, but his patience ran out after Saturday's latest home humiliation.

He changed the formation and put players into different positions but it didn't stop Blues falling to their 11th home defeat of the season.

He said: "They are confirming things for me. They are making my job very easy."

"I just don't think they are good enough. That's the bottom line. It was men against boys."

"We've got to get honest. It is nothing that people don't know at this football club."

"You can shuffle the pack, you can try different systems but at the end of the day if you're not good enough you end up bottom."

"I'm trying to give people who are here the chance to still be here, but it is up to them and if they don't want to take it, it is an easy job for me."

Stefani Miglioranzi, Sam Parkin

and Andy Gurney scored Swindon's goals to make it a miserable day for Adams, five days after the club's relegation to the basement division was confirmed.

But the boss won't give up even if it means rebuilding his entire squad.

He said: "I've still got a lot of faith in next season and hopefully I can build a successful team."

"I'm working hard to bring new players in."
