

Morrocan nets Blues trial

WANDERERS have been giving a trial to a mystery Moroccan frontman at their Booker training ground this week.

The Blues are also hoping to fit up a September reserve match at which they intend to run the rule over a number of triallists.

Wanderers had four scouts out watching matches on Tuesday and another five taking in games on Wednesday and boss Tony Adams now wants to see some of these players in trial action.

The Blues are leaving no stone unturned so that they can pounce in the transfer market if the club's share issue raises sufficient funds.

See Tuesday's Midweek for a report and pictures of Blues v Rochdale